

Associate professorship in Hebrew and Modern Israel

The Department of Cross-Cultural and Regional Studies, Faculty of Humanities, University of Copenhagen, Denmark, invites applications for an associate professorship in Hebrew and Modern Israel to be filled by 1 September 2014 or as soon as possible thereafter.

Department of Cross-Cultural and Regional Studies works with languages, cultures, religion and society, primarily in the world outside Western Europe and the US. Cross-cultural competences and knowledge of the complexity of the world are of vital importance in the globalised world - politically, economically, and culturally.

Job content

The associate professorship is offered in the field of Hebrew studies, with special emphasis on modern Israel.

Teaching and supervision will cover both BA, MA and PhD levels.

The successful applicant must be capable of undertaking research, teaching, supervision, communication and administration in relation to the subject, and, when necessary, provide academic input in other study programs.

The applicant is expected to teach or co-teach courses with colleagues in one or more of the department's general and cross-cultural courses.

The applicant is expected to establish co-operation with one or more of the department's other areas of studies, such as religion studies and minority studies.

In addition to qualifications in research, teaching and communication, the evaluation of applications will also place emphasis on the applicants' interest in working with colleagues to develop research and teaching in their subject area as practised at the University of Copenhagen. Please enclose documentation of plans for this (max. five pages) with your application.

The successful applicant must be able to supervise PhD students.

The position also involves outreach activities as well as a certain number of administrative duties.

The associate professor is expected to be able to take part in all the activities of the Department, including examinations and administration, and also to manage research projects, provide pedagogical supervision, support assistant professors and participate in academic assessment panels.

Qualification requirements

- The applicant must be able to document proficiency in modern Hebrew.
- In assessing the applicant's research qualifications, focus will be on research within cultural and/or social science studies of Israel's modern history and contemporary conditions.
- Experience with IT based distance learning would be welcomed.

When appointing a candidate to the post as associate professor, we stress that the applicant must have research and teaching qualifications corresponding to what can be achieved as part of a successful employment as an assistant professor.

The duties of the position are evenly distributed on tasks related to teaching and tasks related to research (including relevant administration and knowledge-sharing). Hence the assessment of applicants' qualifications will assign equal weight to documented competences in the field of teaching, pedagogy and didactics as in the field of research, research collaboration and research organization. In addition, applicants with experiences and reflections on how most effectively to integrate research and teaching activities will be given priority.

Furthermore, emphasis will be placed on the following:

- Research qualifications, which will be assessed in relation to the period of active research, the degree of originality, and academic output.
- The applicant's scientific record, academic breadth and depth, rigour, thoroughness and accuracy
- Teaching qualifications, (including the ability to conduct teaching in both Danish and English.). See also Educational Charter at http://www.humanities.ku.dk/about/vision_and_goals/educational_charter/
- Documentation of administrative qualifications
- Documentation of research management
- Participation in networks - national and international

Within a reasonable period of time (max. 2 years), non-Danish-speaking appointees are expected to acquire proficiency in Danish sufficient to teach in Danish as well as interact with colleagues and students.
