

2014 Student Paper Prize in the Anthropology of Religion

The Society for the Anthropology of Religion is still accepting submissions for its second annual student paper prize in the anthropology of religion. The student paper prize is aimed towards recognizing and encouraging the writing by students of compelling ethnographies on religion. This prize is intended to foster theoretically significant, ethnographically rich, and publicly-oriented work by scholars at an early stage in their career.

Any paper written by an undergraduate or graduate student involving the anthropology of religion is eligible, if it was prepared for the 2014 meeting of the American Anthropological Association in Washington, DC. Books are not eligible for this competition, nor are works in which religion is of secondary or nominal importance. To be eligible, students must be members of the SAR.

The prize will be awarded at SAR's Business Meeting at the American Anthropological Association Annual Meeting in December 2014. The recipient will receive a certificate and a $250 cash prize. The deadline for submissions is October 24th, 2014.

To submit a paper for consideration, please send an electronic copy to Jessica Mason, Chair of the Student Paper Prize Committee, at jfmason@wisc.edu.
