

CALL FOR PAPERS

for a topical issue of Open Theology

Rethinking Reformation

"Open Theology" (<http://www.degruyter.com/view/j/opth>) invites submissions for the topical issue "Rethinking Reformation", prepared in collaboration with the conference RethinkReformation (Aarhus 2017), organized by Faculty of Arts, and LUMEN: Center for the Study of Lutheran Theology and Confessional Societies at Aarhus University.

Edited by:

Niels Henrik Gregersen (University of Copenhagen)

Bo Kristian Holm (Aarhus University)

DESCRIPTION

The topic invites critical reviews of the legacy of the Reformation. The special focus of the issue will be the reflection of the ongoing theological, philosophical, sociological and political reception of ideas coming from the Lutheran Reformation, as well as other branches of Reformation.

The topical issue explores two major themes:

The first theme is devoted to theological and philosophical questions concerning the relation between humanity, God, and the non-human world. Articles will, inter alia, be concerned with the phenomenology of gift and givenness; the relationship between God, Self, and the Other; Løgstrup's and/or Kierkegaard's Protestantism; the ethical demand; humanism/anti-humanism; creation, cosmology and the ontological status of the world etc.

The second theme focusses on sociological and political questions concerning the Reformation and Modernity, and the relationships between values and community. Articles to this part will, inter alia, be concerned with the relation between the Reformation, Enlightenment and Modernity; disenchantment and values; the possibility of community beyond economic rationality; the status of the works of love; love, grace and community; gift giving within Protestantism etc.
